SRH CREATIVE TOOLS

Our sexual and reproductive health creative tools use storytelling, play, and digital innovation through the Iriza comic book, Kigali Menstruation Station, and Kotana board game to deliver engaging, youth friendly SRH education, with digital versions expanding access and scale.

IRIZA COMIC BOOK

Iriza Comic Book uses storytelling and relatable characters to simplify complex SRH topics such as puberty, consent, menstruation, and decision making, creating safe entry points for discussion in schools and community spaces. It also has a digital audio theatre version that can be listened to, making it accessible for people with visual impairments, and a web based version that can be installed in computer labs for use without internet. The content can be read in about one hour or listened to in 30 minutes, a format preferred by adolescents.

KIGALI MENSTRUATION STATION

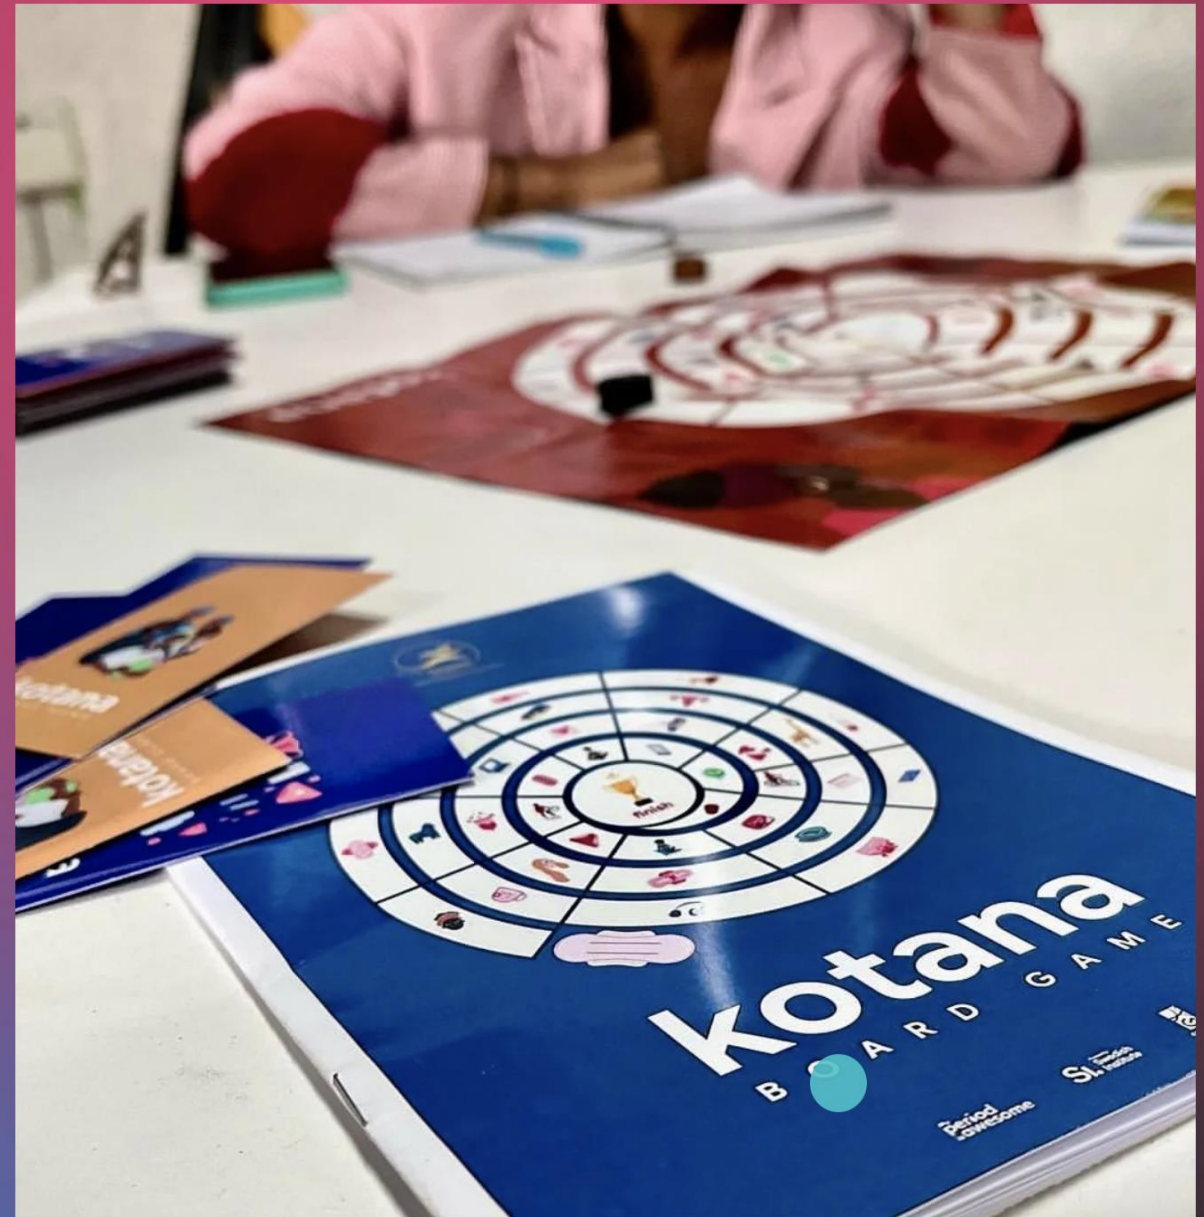

Kigali Menstruation Station is a period positivity education hub available in both physical and digital formats. The physical station combines a curated photo gallery, immersive experience chambers on menstruation, hygiene, and pain, period-proof bathrooms with free menstrual products, and interactive tools like puzzles, the Iriza comic, and the Kotana board game, all facilitated to encourage safe and open conversations. The digital version offers an accessible virtual tour with sign language interpretation, and participants who complete the tour and assessment receive a Certificate of Period Positivity.

KOTANA BOARD GAME

Kotana is an interactive board game that promotes open, stigma-free conversations on Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights among adolescents through fun, team-based play. By embedding SRHR topics into everyday-style conversations, similar to how people discuss sports, politics, or entertainment, the game normalizes learning while creating a comfortable and engaging space to discuss often-taboo subjects.
